

Ira & Reatha T. Post Wildlife Sanctuary

Friends of Vishnu want you to know.....

Thanks,

Thanks go out to everyone who stopped by the Friends of Vishnu tables at Heritage Days in Macomb and the annual Labor Day Celebration in Colchester, whether you stopped to chat and learn more about the site, or whether you made a donation and received a commemorative bottle of Vishnu Springs water (real spring water, just not from the Vishnu spring). And thanks to everyone who has helped at the site, spreading the word or just being a friend to the cause. With all of your help, positive things are happening at the wildlife sanctuary.

Tours,

While many people have expressed an interest in touring Vishnu, it just isn't possible this fall. As you know, the site is owned by the WIU Foundation and falls under the guise of the College of Arts and Sciences in conjunction with the Institute for Environmental Studies, and the Friends of Vishnu are just that—Friends working with the university to help maintain, preserve and promote the site, physically and historically.

An effort to put a tour together during Homecoming weekend had to be put off. Several areas of the university have projects ongoing at the site and initial environmental evaluations of the property are being made. An assessment of the hotel is underway and so, with baited breath, we wait to see what the future may bring. If it becomes feasible to schedule a tour, you will be the first to know.

and Tales.

And, of course, the search for information about Vishnu Springs is ongoing. If you have, or know someone who has photographs taken of Vishnu through the years, the Friends of Vishnu would like to know about them and obtain copies to share with the WIU Archives, where the most complete information about the site can be found. And, if you have stories to share, please let us know.

Thanks again for all that you've done, are doing, and will continue to do to support the revitalization efforts of the Friends of Vishnu at the Ira and Reatha T. Post Wildlife Sanctuary.
